Pre-Glider Training School

The glider pilot training school in Aberdeen, South Dakota ran from May 1942 – September 1942 and was held on four quarter sections of farmland northeast of Aberdeen. The training was a 10-week course divided into Class A and Class B. Class A was for students with no flying experience and class B was a four-week class for those who had flying experience. The courses taught were in meteorology, navigation, maintenance, instruments, chemical war defense and identification. 300 students ranging in ages from 18-36 were scheduled to partake in the training over the course of the summer. The students, 30 staff members, and headquarters for the training school were housed in Seymour Hall at Northern Teachers College.

N.H. “Scout” Mewaldt was the civilian ground school supervisor while Clarence Abeln, Lloyd F. Johnson, Harold Jones, and George Schaunaman were some of the instructors. No gliders were using during the hands on training. Because of this, the school was referred to as Pre-glider. Instead, candidates practiced on dead stick landings with smallcrafts. To simulate the glider landings, they shut off the engines and glided in for a landing. Those who passed the training were transferred to Basic Glider Training elsewhere and eventually to Advanced Glider schools.
